ASSEMBLY ENDS SHORT SESSION

UN Buildup in Korea

To Offset Violations By Reds

PANMUNJOM (UP)—The U.N. Command told a stony-faced Communist general today it was starting a major military buildup in the Republic of Korea to offset one carried out by the Reds in "flagrant violation" of the 1953 Korean armistice agreement.

The reaction was immediate and exactly as expected. North Korean Maj. Gen. Jung Kook Rok flew into a rage and accused the U.N. forces of intending to turn South Korea into a "base for atomic war." He called it a first step to prepare for a "new war."

Today's decision nullifying a key provision of the armistice agreement meant the United States would send into South Korea fleets of its latest atomic bombers and fighters—some 700 miles closer to Red China and Siberia. Later there may be atomic cannon and guided missiles.

Reds Violate Flagrantly

But doing so they were doing what the Communists already had done months ago. The North Korean air force, non-existent at the end of the war, has been built up to nearly 1,000 modern jets. Its beaten army has been rebuilt and rearmed with Soviet equipment.

The entire buildup was in violation of a key paragraph in the armistice agreement which froze the armed forces of each side at its 1953 military strength. The U.N. said the Communists buildup was a "flagrant, repeated and wilful" violation of the agreement.

The Allied decision was read out by U.S. Marine Corps Maj. Gen. Homer D. Ditzenberg, senior member of the U.N. military armistice commission and leader of a Marine division in some of the bitterest fighting of the war.

It was received officially by Jung in the Quonset hut conference room of this neutral zone village. Jung, short, heavy-set and nattily dressed, conferred in whispers with his aides during the 6-minute reading. He was impassive throughout.

But at the end of a 30-minute recess his impassiveness was gone. He stormed back in to the Quonset hut in his well-tailored uniform, quivering with rage, and accused the U.N. of trying to cover up its own armistice violations by accusing the Reds of violating the 4-year-old truce.

Jung said he was lodging the "strongest protest with your side." He called for the "peaceful unification" of Korea and the withdrawal of all foreign troops.

Ike Breakfasts With Legislators

WASHINGTON (UP)—President Eisenhower talked budget, vacation, and even rock 'n roll at a sociable breakfast today with 40 Republican members of the House.

It was the President's third such breakfast for GOP legislators. The menu was eggs, bacon, and fishcakes, and coffee, toast, and fruit juice.

Rep. Ben F. Jensen (Iowa) said the budget talk came up at his table, one of the four tables around which the President circulated.

Jensen said the President "didn't seem too disturbed at what Congress has done in reducing the budget."

Doctor Claims $1,500 Bill for Services 'Absurd'

ERIE, Pa. (UP)—Dr. Elmer Hess, former president of the American Medical Assn., said today a $1,500 doctor's bill submitted for the care of Benny Hooper Jr. was "absurd."

"Of course I would have to know more about it—all the details and the doctor's time put in the case," Hess declared. "But I would say from the few details I have now that (the bill) is absurd."

The bill was submitted by Dr. Joseph Kris, the physician who administered oxygen for 24 hours last May 16 and 17 while Benny was trapped in a well shaft at his Manorville, N.Y., home. Kris also attended the 7-year-old boy during his week's stay at the hospital.

Hess, a urologist at St. Vincent Hospital here and AMA president in 1955, said the Hoopers should send the bill to the grievance committee of their local medical society.

Minor Accident Reported to Police

A minor accident occurred at the intersection of Fourth St. and Fallowfield Ave. in Charleroi late last night, Charleroi police reported today.

The drivers involved were Michael Geslet, of R. D. 2, Charleroi, and Joseph Drdul, of 1214 Lower Meadow Ave., Charleroi.

Tornado Kills 10 in Fargo, North Dakota

FARGO, N. D. (UP) — A tornado wiped out six children in one family to boost the death toll in Thursday night's devastating twister to at least ten. Another 105 persons were injured.

Another tornado struck through the Ashton-Athol area of South Dakota, killing at least one woman.

Authorities desperately sought to contact the dead children's father, Gerald Munson, who was out of town and apparently unaware of the tragedy.

Only the mother and one child of the family of nine survived the disaster. Both the mother and her young son, Rickey, were hospitalized.

The dead children were identified as Mary Beth Munson, 16 months; Lois Ann, 2½ years; Jeanette, 5; Bradley, 10; Darwin, 12, and Phyllis, 16.

The mayor ordered the city under martial law today, turning over all law enforcement to five National Guard units which were rushed here to prevent looting and aid in the mammoth cleanup job.

The twister smashed into Fargo like a "huge black arm," blasting about 100 square blocks of this city of 45,000 population. About 250 buildings were destroyed or damaged.

Damage was estimated at more than one million dollars.

Searchers were hampered during the night by a power failure as the winds tore down electrical lines and knocked out communications. Volunteers probing the debris in foggy weather today said they feared they would find additional bodies in the shattered buildings.

The injured, many of them critically hurt, jammed the city's two hospitals. Emergency appeals were issued for blood plasma.

The city was plunged into darkness and communications were knocked out by the giant twister as it sliced a jagged path through residential districts on the north, west and east sides.

Servicemen Aid Cleanup

Gov. John Davis ordered a detachment of 200 National Guardsmen from Camp Grafton, N.D., to the city to aid in patrol and cleanup duty. They were joined by Naval and Air Force reservists, members of the Finley Air Force Base in Fargo, and state police.

The tornado, described by one witness as resembling a "huge, black arm," swept into the city from the west shortly before 8 p.m. c.s.t. It roared eastward and then veered to the north before disappearing.

Mayor Herschel Lashkowitz estimated that 250 buildings were damaged or flattened by the twister with most of the damage on the North Side. The mayor said total damages would reach more than one million dollars.

The injured were rushed to St Luke's and St John's hospitals. A spokesman at St. Luke's said "There are emergency beds all over the building—in the cafeteria and in the corridors."

Bill Excuses Authority from Tax Payment

HARRISBURG (UP) — Gov George M. Leader today reviewed legislation to excuse the Allegheny County Sanitary Authority from payment of $900,000 in back sales taxes resulting from a contract error.

The bill would open up a 15 day loophole to allow the authority to take advantage of an exemption because the contract was entered several months before the 3 per cent sales tax was enacted last year.

The authority would not have been liable to the tax levy had not the construction contract contained an "escalator scale" instructing the contractors it would pay additional money if a tax was enacted. Legally, the scale made the authority ineligible for an exemption granted similar contracts signed prior to the March 7, 1956 sales tax law.

Allegheny County lawmakers told the House the tax law was never intended to apply to the authority and that it was liable only through a human error. They added the taxes were never paid, pending the fate of the legislation.

Blockade Still In Use to Halt Vernon Traffic

A post barrier has replaced the human blockade that was set up yesterday by a group of North Belle Vernon women to prevent traffic from using a section of Vine St.

The women set up the blockade because heavy trucks and buses "stirred up so much dust that we decided to take matters into our own hands," said one of the protesting women.

According to the women yesterday, the dusty conditions on the street is seriously affecting the health of their children.

Today one of the women said, "We're satisfied with the barrier that has been put up to stop traffic. Now if we can get the borough to put oil on the dusty street, we'll all be satisfied.

Turtle Creek Project Planned

HARRISBURG (UP) — Gov. George M. Leader said today the Turtle Creek channel improvement project will be initiated as soon as the Allegheny County Sanitary Authority has completed installing its interceptor sewer in the channel.

The project calls for deepening of the stream from three to seven feet from the George Westinghouse Memorial Bridge to a point between Wilmerding and Wall. About 300,000 cubic yards of material will be removed from the 14,500 foot channel.

The project also involves the dredging of 800 feet of the Thompson Run channel above the stream's junction with Turtle Creek.

Slight Damage in Local Accident

Mrs. Anthony Galante, of 121 McKee Ave., Monessen, told police she was traveling on Donner Ave. between 10th and 11th streets late yesterday morning when her car struck a parked station wagon belonging to Socrates Loulis, of 1029 Schoonmaker Ave.

Only slight damage resulted, it was said.

Pinball Machines in Fayette Confiscated

State police aided by city police confiscated more than 40 pinball machines yesterday in simultaneous raids in Uniontown, Connellsville and Brownsville.

Armed with search warrants issued by Fayette County Judge W. Russell Carr, 35 troopers and 10 city policemen hit taverns, dairy bars, drug stores and confectionaries.

State officials said Carr requested the raids to halt the practice of awarding cash prizes to pinball machine winners.

The truckloads of pinball machines from the three communities began to roll in state police barracks at Uniontown about 2 p.m. and continued until most of the storage space was filled.

No Arrests Made

Capt. Frank L. Garnow and Sgt. William Munz, of the Uniontown barracks, said no arrests were made and the operation, which they described as a "test case," was directed against the machines themselves.

Fayette County Court immediately was asked by Deputy Atty. Gen. Frank P. Lawley to declare the machines gambling devices and order them destroyed.

President Judge Carr said last night that state police will present a petition to the court today, notices sent to the possessors and then a date set for a hearing.

"Owners of the machines call them a 'game of skill' but we call them vicious gambling devices," Sgt. Munz said yesterday following the surprise raids. He added:

"If such machines were removed entirely from business places and clubs, school students would have money for lunch and more men would buy food for their families. We feel the court should uphold our request for the destruction of the machines."

"Pinball machines are no good. Period," said Sgt. John Rock, from Waynesburg barracks. Other troopers came from Washington, Belle Vernon and Carnegie.

VFW Campaign For Memorial Opened Here

A campaign for a World War II Memorial was launched yesterday by the Allison-Lescanac Post 1190, Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Letters were sent to each member asking for donations to help defray expenses for the installation of a surplus 72,000-pound Sherman medium tank at a suitable site in City Park.

The tank is being acquired from the U. S. Army Depot at Chambersburg, Pa., with Post 1190 paying for the demilitarizing costs and freight charges. This expense will total about 7900 John Hurranko, Post 1190 commander, said today.

"It is our intention to raise as much of the money as possible from our own members," Hurranko said.

"We feel that it is about time something was done to acquiring some sort of a memorial to the World War II serviceman," he added.

If the campaign among Post members is not sufficient, Hurranko said, the Post will then seek other ways to raise the funds.

"We want this tank memorial," he said.

McDonald Won't Step Down as USW Chief

CHICAGO (UP)—David J. McDonald, president of the United Steelworkers, attacked his "loudmouth opponents" who are protesting a hike in union dues and made it clear he has no immediate plans to step down from his post as head of the union.

About 1,000 officials of the USW assembled here Thursday to pledge their support to McDonald in the grand ballroom of the Palmer House Hotel.

Speakers who preceded McDonald criticized the rebel "Dues Protest Committee" faction in the union and charged them with approaching Sen. John McClellan (D-Ark.), head of the Senate Rackets Committee, to urge an investigation of the USW.

Each speaker was allotted three minutes. The talks went on through the morning and afternoon sessions.

McDonald thanked them for their loyalty and said "but it is the deeds that must follow these words that will count."

Turning to his foes, McDonald said he would talk to a member of the USW who allegedly predicted McDonald would make a "farewell speech" at the meeting.

"If that allegation is true," he said, "this man is going to get out of the union."

Joe Germano, director of USW District 31 in the Chicago area, took McDonald to task, but only for "waiting too long to call this meeting and lay down the law."

"It's time the paid workers of the USW realize they must either pay up or get out," declared Germano, who heads the union's biggest district.

Norman Nellis, director of District 35 at Atlanta, called for an end to the "shenanigans going on around the union."

The Dues Protest Committee originally was formed to seek repeal of a $3-a-month increase in dues voted by delegates to the USW international convention at Los Angeles last year. The group grew into a full-fledged movement against the administration of McDonald.

Leader Blasts Action of GOP Over Budget

HARRISBURG (UP) — The 1957 Legislature went into the history books today, but its record will probably provide the top issues in the 1958 statewide election campaigns.

The Republican-controlled Assembly, ending a series of marathon sessions, adjourned early today as the shortest session of the state's lawmakers in eight years.

House Speaker W. Stuart Helm banged the sine die adjournment gavel in that chamber at 12:34 a.m. edt while Lt. Gov. Roy E. Furman dismissed the Senate at 12:45 a.m. after Gov. George M. Leader had been notified.

Senate Majority Whip Albert R. Pechan (R-Armstrong), a member of a ceremonial committee that called on the governor, reported back to the Senate and added:

"I told the governor I predicted he would call us back in special session before he retires from the governorship."

The governor immediately issued a 91-word statement after adjournment in which he termed the session "a bad Legislature—a Legislature that made it plain it wasn't concerned with the needs of people."

He blamed the record on a "handful of Republican leaders" and said he would outline his views in detail later this week.

The session that left the governor about 70 million dollars short of his budget requests ran 5½ months, interspersed with several brief recesses. Actually, the House worked 71 legislative days and the Senate 64 days.

A formidable roadblock to final adjournment was broken Thursday night when the twin chambers adopted a conference committee report to increase the borrowing capacity of the General State Authority, the Commonwealth's borrow-and-build agency for state institutions and projects.

Votes Split

The vote was 46-4 in the Senate and 133-19 in the House on the proposal to up the borrowing limit by 50 million dollars to the 480 million dollar mark, with the extra funds to be apportioned—$23,500,000 for completion of projects underway; $1,000,000 for additional land for state teachers' colleges, and the remaining $25,500,000 to be determined by the authority board.

Republicans held the whiphand throughout most of the session this year due to their majorities and handed Leader a $1,500,000,000 budget over bitter Democratic opposition.

Biggest disappointments for the governor were Republican refusal to go along fully with his fund requests for expanded mental health services and industrial development and slum clearance carryovers from his first two years in office, and his proposed new higher education program.

But Republicans pointed to "solid" accomplishments in their economy drive, with a hold the line policy against new taxes in the first session in 12 years that

Fayette Judge Spent $12,637 During Primary

Judge W. Russell Carr spent $12,637.50 in his successful bid for nomination on both the Democratic and Republican tickets in the May 21 primary in Fayette County.

William A. Reed, treasurer of the Carr for Judge Committee, revealed contributions of $10,000 from Judge Carr and 150 persons, whose contributions ranged as high as $8,700.

In other expense accounts filed in the county commissioners' office, Charles Pabish presented receipts for expenditures for Washington Twp. totaling $500. His account showed payments of $15 to $30 to 24 persons.

Expenditures for District Attorney Joseph Kovach, unsuccessful judge candidate on the Democratic ticket, amounted to $7,472.76. Of this amount, $3,271.76 was paid for advertising, while 240 workers received the rest.

Other unsuccessful judge candidates, James A. Reilly and Anthony Cavalcante, spent $9,177.08 and $1,757.46 respectively.

GOP in County Lists Receipts For Campaign

The Westmoreland County Republican Committee listed receipts of $5,526.19 from its financial committee and $774.40 from the sale of dinner tickets for its May primary election campaign, according to the expense account filed yesterday in the commissioners' office by Daniel J. Snyder, Jr., treasurer.

Atty. Avra N. Pershing, Jr., who won one of the two GOP nominations for common pleas court judge, reported his total expenditures as $2,911.80. He said he received no contributions.

Judge Edward G. Bauer, in his successful nomination bid on the Democratic ticket, listed receipts of $5,570 and expenses at $5,727.99.

District Attorney L. Alexander Sculco, Bauer's successful running mate for judge of common pleas, said he received a total of $4,150 in contributions and spent $5,484.43.

Yesterday was the final day to file expense accounts with the county commissioners according to election laws.

Family of Benny Hooper Has Many Problems to Think About

MANORVILLE, N. Y. (UP) — The Benjamin Hooper family woke up this week to the morning after a "miracle." In some respects it's been a headache.

Benny Hooper Jr., 7, fell into a sandy well hole five weeks ago Thursday night. The eyes and prayers of the nation were focussed on the yard behind the Hooper's neat little gray house as hundreds of rescuers fought shifting sand and exhaustion for 24 hours. Benny was saved.

"How can we possibly thank everybody for what they did," Mrs. Hooper said today. "We are so happy at what all of them did."

But the after effects have become more devastating than the destruction of the Hooper garden beneath the feet of the rescuers and the tires of their trucks. There are troubles that were born of public kindness as well.

"If I sat down to think about them all at once, I'd be in Islip [illegible]," Mrs. Hooper said, referring to a nearby state mental hospital.

At the top of the list is a $1,500 bill from Dr. Joseph Kris, who stood at the top of the well throughout Benny's imprisonment, directing life-saving oxygen to his sandy prison, and tended him through a subsequent week in the hospital.

"I don't know what to think," Mrs. Hooper said. "If we had their money, we would try to pay it, but you can't get blood from a stone."

Hooper, a road worker, brings home $62 a week. Mrs. Hooper earns an additional $43 working nights as a telephone operator. She has been unable to work since the "miracle"—there've been too many other things to cope with. She expects to return next week.

A sympathetic public has made gifts to the family. In cash they have totalled less than $400, Mrs. Hooper said. That has made up her salary and just a bit more, she said.

There have been two $1,000 payments for television appearances. One is a trust fund which cannot be touched until Benny is 21. The other the Hoopers gave in gratitude to the volunteer Manorville Fire Department for its part in the rescue, she said. A magazine bought Mrs. Hooper's story for another $400, but that hasn't been paid yet.

Benny has received boxes of bubble gum, comic books and small toys and three big presents, his mother said, a car that really

Davis Murder Trial May Go To Jury Today

KITTANNING, Pa. (UP) — Prosecution and defense attorneys made their closing summations today in the murder trial of Robert T. Davis, Pittsburgh ex-convict accused of bludgeoning a Leechburg housewife to death on the doorsteps of her home.

The state seeks the death penalty for Davis, whom police have charged with a long series of crimes of violence against women. Following the closing arguments of the attorneys, Judge J. Frank Graff will make his charge and turn the case over to the jury of six men and six women.

Ignoring the advice of his court-appointed attorneys, Davis took the witness stand Thursday to repudiate a signed statement which he made to state police in which he admitted striking down Mrs. Emily S. Foster, 25, with a lug wrench to steal her purse last Jan. 30.

"I didn't say it," he declared "I signed it."

Davis testified officers wrote the confession and then threatened him with life imprisonment if he failed to cooperate.

"I didn't want to spend the rest of my life in jail," Davis said. He maintained during an afternoon and night session he never was told he would be charged with first degree murder.

Davis said the threats of life imprisonment were made by state police Sgt. James D. Barger during questioning at the office of Charles McInerney of the Allegheny County-Pittsburgh crime laboratory on March 18.

Special prosecutor Samuel Strauss later called McInerney and state police Cpl. M. M. Poloskey who testified they heard Barger question Davis but never was a threat mentioned.

Was in the Area

Davis, under examination, admitted to being in the Vandegrift area the night of the slaying. But he denied ever being in Leechburg until officers took him there after his arrest.

Barger earlier read into the court record the confession allegedly signed by Davis. The statement detailed how Davis had been drinking near his Homewood home about 8 o'clock of the night of the slaying. He said he then went for a drive, got lost somewhere in Leechburg, and started to follow a woman in a car.

Davis, according to the statement, admitted he parked his car near the woman's house "and before she knew it . . . I approached . . . and grabbed her purse."

"The woman was startled and she hollered 'What?' She continued to hold onto her pocketbook and started to scream . . . During the excitement I hit her with a lug iron that I had been concealing in my hand. I must of hit her a couple of times," the statement read.

"I knew she wasn't dead because she was breathing."

Mrs. Foster died in her husband's arms.

has not imposed new levies. They also argued that despite their budget slashes the governor was getting about 250 million dollars more in the new fiscal period than was spent in the last.

They are virtually certain to point out their accomplishments in the campaigns next year for governor, U. S. senator and other statewide offices. GOP leaders said recently that Leader was already in the race for the Senate with an ambitious legislative program as a backdrop.

The Democrats, on the other hand, are on record as considering the cuts in the governor's fiscal and legislative programs prime ammunition for their campaigns. The party leaders disclosed their plans at a fund-raising dinner here Wednesday night featuring former President Harry S. Truman who compared the GOP - dominated Legislature with the "good-for-nothing, do-nothing Republican 80th Congress."

Got Sales Tax Again

On the fiscal front, Leader was reluctantly saddled with continuation of the 3 per cent sales tax, a levy he fought so vigorously in the 1955-56 session and around which the GOP revenue raising plan revolved. He let the reenactment become law without his signature.

The GOP contended the governor's program would cost more money, with a resulting increase in present levies or new taxes. They also turned down his request to continue the one-cent emergency gasoline tax to help finance the state's mushrooming highway system.

The tax reverted to five cents a gallon June 1 amid Republican contention a large surplus in the Motor License Fund would take care of future needs.

Other big revenue raisers continued on the books by the GOP included:

The corporate net income tax at 6 per cent, for $330,000,000 through 1958-59, then dropping to 5 per cent, the 1 per cent real estate transfer tax, $11,500,000; the five-cent cigarette tax, $111,500,000, and the 14 mill tax on gross receipts of public utilities, $32,000,000.

Both sides agreed on a 43 million dollar tax break to business and industry by allowing the long postponed manufacturers exemption from the capital stock tax to become effective next Jan. 1.

They also saw eye-to-eye on a Korean bonus. The governor contended there should be an adequate tax program to pay for it, but Republicans indicated time enough for that after the voters are sounded out on the bonus idea next November.

runs, a bicycle, and a valuable German shepherd dog.

The result—"Our insurance has gone up," Mrs. Hooper said.

"There have been so many sightseers, and the children all want to ride in the car," she explained. The family has had to increase its liability insurance. The insurance man has urged that they fence the yard in addition, she said. They haven't decided what to do about that.

One other gift the family did accept—the offer of a Pennsylvania resort owner for a nine-day vacation on the house.

Our family doctor told us to go," Mrs. Hooper said, "and they did. But they came home Sunday for the morning after.

"It's been a bad week," she said. "Our car broke down. And I had to have a tooth pulled in Pennsylvania. That cost us $40."

Detroit Firm Enters Wheeling Track Bid

WHEELING, W. Va. (UP)—The Hazel Park Racing Assn. of Detroit, today bid $1,700,000 for Wheeling Downs in an effort to upset a previous high offer of $1,500,000 submitted by Philadelphia contractor John B. Kelly at the June 12 federal government auction of the race track.

The Detroit group filed its bid with Federal Judge Harry E. Watkins at a hearing called to determine whether the offer of Kelly and his associates should be approved.

The track, under federal receivership for the past five years, was auctioned to help satisfy income tax claims of $3,285,632 against its former owner, William G. Lias.

James V. Ballanca, vice president of the Detroit track, said the Hazel Park group did not bid at the auction last week because it understood the bidding was to start at $1,800,000.

The Detroit offer was the first filed at today's hearing. The way remained open for other upset bids or for Kelly to make a higher offer.

Wheeling attorney Robert Riley, representing the Hazel Park backers, explained that the Detroit group was formed in 1948 and operates a 5-8ths mile track with a daily mutual average of 780,000.

In addition to Ballanca, Hazel Park officials at the federal hearing were secretary John R. Monaghan, treasurer S. Truman Hart, Jack Tocco, a director, Anthony Zerilli, administrative coordinator for the association; and Robert Leavitt, the mutuals manager.

Today's hearing was the second phase of the federal auction of the track once operated by Lias, a former Wheeling gambler and racketeer who, in addition to his tax troubles, is facing deportation to Greece.

A group headed by Kelly made the only offer received for the track last week. At Charleston Thursday, the West Virginia racing Commission approved racing dates of July 10-Sept. 24 and Oct. 19-Nov. 16 contingent on approval of sale of the track to Kelly.

Bethlehem Steel Making Progress On Power Plant

NEW YORK (UP)—Bethlehem Steel Corp. is making "rapid progress" on the design of a nuclear power plant for a destroyer, a top company official said today.

Daniel D. Strohmeier, vice president of the company's ship-building division, said successful completion of this project will be a major step toward the U. S. Navy's goal of an atomic-powered task force.

He said development work is being carried on Bethlehem's Central Technical Department, under contract to the Knolls Atomic Power Laboratory of the Atomic Energy Commission in Schenectady, N. Y.

The Knolls laboratory operated for the AEC by General Electric Co., will be responsible for development of the nuclear propulsion plant. The reactor which will form the core of the new system will be a pressurized water type.

Bethlehem Steel, the world's second biggest steel maker, also has been awarded the contract for the design and construction of the USS Long Beach, the world's first nuclear - powered guided missile cruiser.

CUMBERLAND, Md. (UP) — Donald F. Frye, 23, Cumberland died at Cumberland Memorial Hospital Thursday to become the first victim of paralytic polio of 1957 in western Maryland.

Narcotics Suspect Is Freed

PITTSBURGH (UP)—A federal judge Thursday dismissed a narcotics case when government attorneys refused to permit the defense to study a federal agent's reports in accordance with a recent Supreme Court decision.

Federal Judge Joseph P. Willson based his ruling on a decision handed down June 3 by the high court in the case of New Mexico labor leader Clinton E. Jencks. The court, in upsetting Jencks' conviction, ruled that the government must turn over to the defense on demand any reports made by a federal agent in cases where the agent's testimony is introduced by the prosecution.

Willson's ruling was the first in Pittsburgh to be based on the high tribunal's decision in the Jencks' case.

On trial in U. S. District Court here accused of violating federal narcotics laws was Alvin Clark, 22, Pittsburgh. He was charged with selling an ounce of heroin to a federal narcotics undercover agent last September.

When the former agent took the stand, defense attorney Joseph Rossi demanded to see his reports. Willson confirmed reports had been filed with superiors and ordered prosecutor John R. Gavin to produce them or see the defendant go free.

"I have orders, then, to submit to dismissal," Gavin replied. Willson threw out the case.

U. S. Attorney D. Malcolm Anderson later supported Gavin's stand. "He could only have authorized that portion of the report related to the witness' testimony," he declared.

Says Pike Work Was Wasted

HARRISBURG (UP) — Defense attorneys in the turnpike conspiracy trial have apparently met with little success in their attempts to shatter a Commonwealth witness's testimony that mine-filling work on the Northeastern Extension was "almost wholly unnecessary."

Daniel H. Connelly, Kingston, state deputy secretary of mines, testified Thursday that mine-filling operations performed for the turnpike commission by the Manu-Mine Research and Development Corp., Reading, for almost $7,000,000 "did not improve the situation one bit."

Five former top turnpike officials and two top officers of Manu-Mine face charges of conspiracy in connection with a 1955 contract awarded to the firm for the drilling of an unlimited number of holes along a 12-mile section of the turnpike across the anthracite coal region in Lackawanna and Luzerne counties.

A full day of cross-examination by defense attorneys failed to shake Connelly's testimony in regard to both the necessity for the drilling and the $12.50 per foot rate which Manu-Mine charged the commission.

Connelly repeatedly stated that what drilling was necessary could have been performed by the state mines department for about $4.50 a foot.

Sticks to Testimony

Even a hypothetical disaster caused by a hypothetical subsidence on the turnpike, failed to crack Connelly's assurance.

Earl V. Compton, chief defense counsel, asked Connelly "who would be responsible" if a school bus crashed into a cave-in crater along the highspeed roadway.

"That's a difficult question to answer," Connelly replied. "Up near the Pocono section there is an 8-inch dip in the road, and there never were any mines in that area."

"Doesn't that point up the need for care in the construction of a high speed road?" Compton asked.

"That's what we took into consideration in determining what work was needed," Connelly said.

He explained that the Mines Department was "completely in accord" with plans to fill so-called "first mined areas" where pillars remain to support mine overheads and in other mined areas which have been worked out within the past seven years.

This work, he said, could have been done for $2,881.

Scaife Retrial Is Refused by County Court

GREENSBURG, Pa. (UP) — Westmoreland County Court today refused a new trial for Richard Mellon Scaife, against whom a civil court jury returned automobile accident damage verdicts totaling more than $105,000.

Scaife, a member of the prominent Pittsburgh - Ligonier Mellon and Scaife families, was involved in a highway crash in which five members of a Jeannette district family were injured Nov. 25, 1954, on Route 30 near Greensburg.

While refusing a new trial, Judge John M. O'Connell reduced one of the five damage verdicts involved from $10,000 to $5,000.

O'Connell termed the case a "clear case of liability which was practically admitted by the defendant. The accident resulted in serious injury to some occupants of the car."

The original award to Mr. and Mrs. Arthur W. Rain Jr. on behalf of their son Richard was reduced. Other damage awards were: Mary Jane Rain $65,000; Arthur Rain Jr., her husband $2,974; Catherine Rain, $25,000 and her husband Arthur W. Rain Sr., $2,803.

Diplomat's Daughter In Talk with Mother

WASHINGTON (UP)—The future of the troubled teen-age romance between a Swedish diplomat's daughter and her handsome Capitol page boy hinged today on the outcome of a mother-and-daughter talk.

Pretty 16 year-old Christina Wennerstrom and 18-year-old Huw Williams were back with their mothers again after a two-week Canadian "honeymoon" without benefit of clergy. Police had searched for them in 13 states.

Christina returned from the arms of her sweetheart to the arms of her mother Thursday after the runaway teenagers were arrested on a speeding charge near Williamsport, Pa. Christina carried a huge teddy bear.

Both Christina and Huw wore wedding bands, but finally admitted they were not married. They said a county clerk in Charles Town, W. Va., refused to give them a marriage license because they were too young.

Swedish press attache Hugo Lindgren told newsmen the future of Christina's "relationship with the boy will be left up to Christina and the American authorities after she has talked it all out with her mother."

However, Lindgren said he believed Christina would agree to return to Sweden for the present and continue her romance with Huw by mail. Her father, who strongly opposed her marriage to Huw because of their age, already has returned to Sweden for reassignment.

County Officers Salaries Will Undergo Study

HARRISBURG (UP)—The Legislature's research arm today received a House resolution asking it to determine if Pennsylvania's county officers are adequately paid.

The measure approved prior to adjournment Thursday, was the lone balm for supporters of an 11 bill package to increase third through eighth class county officers' salaries. The package, granting increases ranging from $200 to $2,000, ran into major opposition in a post-midnight session Thursday when a bill affecting fourth class counties was defeated. The remainder of the bills were removed from the work calendar when their supporters learned they were doomed.

The resolution asked the Joint State Government Commission to make a thorough investigation of the "salaries and other compensation" of all county officers, with a view toward removing the "inequalities which now exist." The commission would report its findings to the 1959 Legislature.

He will be assisted by the Rev. Michael Yarosh, local pastor and visiting priests of the Pittsburgh district.

A banquet will follow in the parish hall at 1 p.m.

Rep. Kenneth Keating — Rep. Donald Jackson

MOVE AGAINST 'RED RULING' — Two members of Congress, Rep. Kenneth Keating of New York, ranking Republican on the judiciary committee, and Rep. Donald Jackson (R), California, a member of the un-American activities committee, are weighing moves to counter-act the Supreme Court decision which throws out contempt convictions for refusing to name former Communist associates. Keating's idea is to have all un-American activities committee investigations preceded by introduction of an actual piece of proposed legislation; Jackson's, that the committee be made a legislative committee within the restricted area of national security. In this way Congress could nullify the court's criticism that the committee may have exposed "for the sake of exposure."

Salotti Is Installed By Lions

Daniel Salotti was installed president of the Monessen Lions Club at a Ladies Night dinner meeting last evening in the Park Casino.

Other officers installed were Bud Roman, first vice president; Richard Manderino, second vice president; Stephen Wisyanski, third vice president; George A. Stofka, corresponding secretary; Armand Mori, financial secretary; Michael Hardon, treasurer; Anthony Stupakis, tail twister; Paul Frazzitta, Lion tamer; Bernard Massa, director; Nicholas Puleo, director and William Pushkar, director.

The installation was conducted following a 6:30 dinner with Deputy District Governor-elect Ross Aiello serving as installing officer.

President William Essey presided and 150 Lions and guests attended. Walter Labeka led in group singing. The invocation and benediction was by the Rev. Theodore Benkovic.

Essey presented incoming president Daniel Salotti with the gavel and the president's pin. Daniel Salotti in turn, presented William Essey with a past president's pin.

It was reported that a successful broom sale was just recently completed. Receipts will be forwarded to the Pennsylvania Association for the Blind, makers of the brooms. Chairmen for this project were Michael Komar, Nicholas Puleo and Anthony Todaro.

A report on the carnival, which will be sponsored next week, was given by Chairman Harry Chodes.

Chairman Joseph Shoemaker of the fireworks committee reported that plans are complete for Monessen's first fireworks display in many years, Wednesday, July 3 at the Memorial stadium.

Beginning at 8 p.m. a 15-piece orchestra will entertain the crowd for two hours. Other acts scheduled are the Lion's quartet and singer Primo Gelli. The fireworks display will begin at 10 o'clock.

Following the meeting, the evening was spent in dancing.

Youths Held in Robbery in Style Of Old West

UNIONTOWN, Pa. (UP)—Juvenile authorities today held three Masontown teen-agers who are accused of attempting a highway robbery in the style of the old West.

Masontown police said the youngsters, two 16 and one 17, barricaded a road south of the town with boulders, tree stumps and limbs Wednesday night.

When Stephen Bartovich, of near Masontown, drove up to the barrier with his family, he got out of his automobile to clear the road. One of the boys, armed with a rifle, called out that it was a holdup.

Bartovich hurled a stone at the boy. After firing a wild shot, the youngsters fled. They were picked up by police Thursday.

Previous to the holdup attempt, police said, the boys had burglarized a Masontown garage and stolen an automobile.

Bloom Praises GOP Legislators

HARRISBURG (UP)—Republican State Chairman George I. Bloom today praised the Republican controlled Legislature for "accomplishing what many people said would be impossible."

"They cut 80 million dollars from George Leader's inflated requests for appropriations of $1,522,000,000 and saved motorists 60 million dollars more by refusing to continue the emergency one-cent tax on gasoline when it wasn't needed," Bloom said.

The Republican state chairman also credited the lawmakers with saving the state 180 million dollars in interest over a 30-year period by refusing to grant more than a 50 million dollar increase in the General State Authority borrowing capacity.

Ike Says GOP Has Concern for Everyone

WASHINGTON (UP)—President Eisenhower told Young Republicans Thursday night that the GOP has a constant concern for every American "no matter what his religion or the color of his skin."

The President spoke at the conclusion of a tribute to him by 1,500 delegates to the 10th Young Republican Convention.

The President told the Young Republicans that when he heard they had adopted a resolution honoring him it "brought tears to my eyes."

Vice President Richard M. Nixon planned to address the delegates today. He was unable to make a scheduled appearance Thursday because of duties on Capitol Hill.

Eisenhower called upon the Young Republicans to work for "a world of peace in a land of justice and of plenty."

He said he knew that in future years millions of persons would be attracted "to the party that represents soundness in all governmental dealings with never failing concern for every last human being in America, no matter what his religion or the color of his skin."

"That, as I see it, is Republicanism," the President said.

Gov. Cecil Underwood of West Virginia, in introducing the President, expressed the Young Republicans' appreciation for Eisenhower's "dedicated leadership . . . to this nation and to all free peoples."

Underwood said Eisenhower had "renewed the faith of our generation in our national heritage and our institutions of free government."

He pledged, on behalf of the Young Republicans, "to emulate your dedication to service and to support your courageous leadership for Americans and all of humanity as we progress toward a new age of responsible freedom and world peace."

Low Bidders On Nike Sites

PITTSBURGH (UP) — Thomas Maioli, Export, RD 1, and the Burrell Construction and Supply Co., New Kensington, were apparent low bidders for improvement work on eight Nike sites in the Pittsburgh Defense Area, the U.S. Army Engineers disclosed today.

The New Kensington firm submitted a total bid of $356,900 for work at six sites and the Export company a total bid of $67,126 for work at two sites.

The engineers said the work to be done includes additional drainage, paving and resurfacing, seeding and installation of storm sewers. Additional fuel storage tanks for generators also will be provided.

Price of Prosperity

CHICAGO (UP) — James Zarrello left Italy at the age of 17 to seek his fortune in the United States. Zarrello, now 52, invited his mother, who hadn't seen him in 35 years, for a visit to see how well he had done in the new world. "You've grown fatter," she said when she viewed his prosperity.

New York Pastor at Annual Rotary Dinner

Dr. John Sutherland Bonnell, pastor of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church of New York City, addressed 200 Rotarians and guests at the annual Rehoboth meeting of the Belle Vernon Rotary Club on "Design for Living" last night.

Stressing the value of adapting every day life to a spiritual rather than a material pattern, Dr. Bonnell urged the men to "do for others to keep the nation strong."

He took as his example, Dr. Albert Schweitzer, who has dedicated his life to working in Africa among the natives.

A noted author and lecturer, Dr. Bonnell served pastorates in Nova Scotia, Canada, New Brunswick and his present church, where he has served since 1935. In many of his books he has analyzed the need for a Christian faith in order to progress and in his address last night he emphasized this need in any organization or individual.

On six different occasions Dr. Bonnell has visited Europe studying the social and religious situations in most of the countries on the continent and in 1941 he went by plane to England as good will ambassador of the America Church to the British Church.

Charles Toteda, president of the Belle Vernon Rotary Club, opened the meeting and introduced Thomas Malpass, a Belle Vernon Rotarian, who is currently serving as District Governor. Malpass annually arranges the Rehoboth meeting, which is attended by many valley Rotarians.

The musical entertainment was provided by Aneurin Bodycomb and his quartet from Pittsburgh, which included Lola Werlinich, Dorothy Tahannovich, Robert Bodycomb and Robert Riedel.

The Senate at the Brink Again

THE SENATE of the United States is once again approaching a point of decision on the issue of civil rights, the issue which heretofore has always managed to display one of the least attractive sides of American democracy.

The issue comes to the Senate this time in somewhat different form. The House has passed a bill, sponsored by the Eisenhower administration, which would give the federal government the right to seek injunctions to restrain anyone from denying to any qualified citizen the right to vote.

The intent of this bill, obviously, is to extend the right to vote to those Negroes in the South who, by one device or another, are denied that right.

So far, history is repeating itself accurately. Several times in the past the House has passed a civil rights measure of this kind.

But when it gets to the Senate, it is either buried in some committee dominated by Southern Democrats. Or, if it gets to the floor, a vote is prevented by the device of unlimited debate — the filibuster — even though a clear majority may be ready to vote for the bill.

* * *

IT IS NOT just civil rights which is involved in this predicament. Also involved are the fundamental philosophical cleavage in the Democratic party and the integrity of the Senate as a lawmaking body in a representative government.

As to the cleavage in the Democratic party, that is well illustrated in the House vote on this bill, which was passed by a vote of 286 to 126.

In the majority were 168 Republicans and 118 Democrats. And voting against the bill were 107 Democrats and only 19 Republicans.

Thus it is seen that the Democratic members of the House were split almost down the middle on the simple, fundamental question as to whether the rights of all qualified citizens to vote should be protected.

And in the Senate, where the rules are such that the Southern Democrats have always been able to prevent even a vote on civil rights, the party cleavage is still more obvious.

The Senate as an institution also has a serious problem in dealing with the filibuster device. And it seems quite likely that there is going to be no civil rights legislation until the Senate somehow manages to subscribe to the principle of majority rule.

Stirone Case Is Another Example

THE CONVICTION in federal court at Pittsburgh of Nick Stirone provides another illustration of how the wrong kind of people can abuse the power that often goes with leadership of labor unions.

Stirone has for many years been a virtual "czar" over the common labor supply for the construction industry throughout the Pittsburgh district. And a jury found him guilty of extorting upwards of $30,000 from a contractor supplying mixed concrete for the construction of the new Allenport strip mill of the Pittsburgh Steel Co.

According to the testimony in the case, all Stirone needed to do was to threaten this contractor with labor trouble. And the contractor had to pay tribute of 50 cents on every cubic yard of concrete delivered to the job. Either that — or no concrete.

The law has been a long time catching up with Nick Stirone, it seems. He has figured repeatedly in episodes which cast doubt on the purity of his leadership, but has somehow escaped prosecution. And he did not escape this time only because the contractor in the case, who went bankrupt partly because of his "deal" with Stirone, was willing to tell the story in front of a judge and jury.

* * *

HERE is another instance, we believe, pointing to a flaw in the organization set-ups of some labor unions. Something is patently wrong when a crook like Stirone can set himself up as an autonomous dictator over the labor supply of a whole industry, responsible to nothing but his own greed.

It seems to us that if this particular union had been organized so that its leaders were regularly accountable to the membership and operating under proper checks and balances, Stirone would never have been around long enough to get caught in a violation of the law. At the first false move, he would have been thrown out by the members themselves.

Whatever is done by way of legislation to cleanse the labor movement of its crooks can hardly be a substitute for more democratic operation of unions. The time to get rid of a Stirone is long before he becomes a "czar".

Merry-Go-Round—

U. S. Wants Test Area In Australia

By DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON — It's become so difficult to find enough space to test nuclear weapons that the United States is negotiating with Australia for the use of its vast interior desert.

This is the isolated Woomura Rocket Range where the British exploded two atomic bombs.

Mr. Pearson

The Defense Department is interested in leasing it because the Western Hemisphere has just about run out of space for testing long-range guided missiles. We have too many people, too many cities that might get hit or contaminated.

The Australian missile range would be used for testing the ICBM or Intercontinental Ballistic Missile. We are now testing this off the Florida capes, but the missiles are aimed toward South America, and, although we have negotiated treaty arrangements with Latin American countries permitting us to track the missiles, Latin Americans have become increasingly jittery over these tests.

Just recently the Atlas had to be exploded in the air by the ground safety officer because it started to go out of control and he feared it might hit a near-by Florida city. Latin Americans fear the missile would be even harder to control once it gets over the Equator and heads in the general direction of Rio de Janeiro, Montevideo or Buenos Aires.

Furthermore, tracking a missile over land is much easier than over water. The United States has set up a chain of islands in the South Atlantic. However, the great uninhabited Australian desert would permit tracking over dry land.

Australia is reported willing to permit use of her missile range in return for the use of modern American atomic weapons. The granting of Australian air routes across the United States is also reported to be tied up with the missile negotiations.

Unpalatable Breakfast

Congressional guests at the recent White House breakfast found themselves chewing a large Pennsylvania dam mixed up in their ham and eggs.

Ike was talking about the "item veto" plan which would permit him to veto single "pork barrel" projects out of an appropriation bill without having to veto the entire bill.

The suggestion was greeted with a horrified silence.

"Well, now, wait a minute, gentlemen," interposed the President. "I'm only advocating a little economy. I thought you fellows were for economy.

"It seems," he continued, "that with many members of Congress, economy on government spending is good everywhere except in their own states and districts."

At this point, GOP Rep. Leon Gavin of Oil City, Pa., a leading economy spokesman, spoke up: "Mr. President, under the Constitution, Congress cannot relinquish its legislative powers to the executive branch of the government."

"Well, Leon," shot back Ike, "I would say that you fit very well into the category I have just been talking about. You are all the time espousing economy in Congress. You tell me to cut down on foreign aid and other things that I think are important for the country as a whole.

"But how about that $100-million appropriation for a big dam on the Allegheny River in your district, which is part of the civil functions bill? I noticed that you haven't made a speech against that on the House floor."

Congressman Gavin stopped chewing on his ham and eggs so abruptly it looked as if he had bitten right into the Allegheny dam.

The White House Lobby

The White House palace guard has done a lot of effective wire-pulling on Capitol Hill in the past, but seldom has it operated with such backstage intensity as it did to pass the civil rights bill.

Assistant President Sherman Adams was on the telephone constantly rallying Republican votes. A swarm of White House aides, led by Jack Martin, former aide to the late Senator Taft, was busy buttonholing. Vice President Nixon personally talked to every California Republican and several from other states.

White House lobbyists were careful, however, to work through GOP leader Joe Martin in the House and Bill Knowland in the Senate.

This miffed Congressman Charles Halleck of Indiana, who had been the chief contact in the House and didn't like being bypassed.

"If the White House wants me to help," he grumbled privately, "why don't they come to me?"

In the end, however, Halleck also joined in lining up Republican votes for civil rights.

Correction: E. S. Willis, not John Callahan, is the General Electric Company spokesman who admitted that GE pockets as much as $6,500,000 a year in dividends from the welfare fund.

Love Letters in the Sand

From Washington—

Ike's Influence on the Rise

By ROSCOE DRUMMOND

President Eisenhower is making headway in recouping his political prestige and repairing his tactical mistakes in handling the budget.

He has arrested the headlong drive in Congress to cut the budget to pieces, anywhere and everywhere.

He has won three consecutive and resounding victories on top-priority legislation in the past week and is thus in a better position for the tougher battles ahead. His victories were these:

Mr. Drummond

1 — Senate approval, by 57 to 25, of the administration's $3.6 billion foreign aid authorization bill, uncut from the President's final figure.

2 — A unanimous endorsement by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, including the reluctant Republican leader, Senator Knowland, of the treaty putting the United States into the 80-nation atoms-for-peace agency.

3 — House passage of the administration's right-to-vote legislation.

Popularity Declines

These developments do not guarantee that even the main parts of Mr. Eisenhower's budget are out of the woods or that his political influence is back to where it was after the election.

The Gallup poll recently recorded a sharp decline in the President's popularity from 79 to 62 per cent, a drop of 17 points in five months, the largest political fall-out he has ever had. This undoubtedly reflects the confusion and dissent over the budget.

There is no doubt, I think, that the evident division between the President and Secretary Humphrey over how much the budget could be safely cut and the failure of the White House to enter the controversy promptly and decisively created a public impression that Mr. Eisenhower didn't have his hand firmly on the tiller.

Even after the President began to marshall his large resources and to commit his leadership unequivocally to the defense of his appropriation requests, the feeling that he wasn't fully on top of things has lingered.

Public Uncertain

On a trip as far West as Utah during which I had the opportunity to talk with a lot of people, the one constant question, asked by supporters and critics alike, was: Is the President really in charge? The very frequency of the question is evidence of continuing public uncertainty.

Events, not words, will alone dissolve this uncertainty. The administration's latest congressional victories are beginning to dissolve it. Mr. Eisenhower is still only 8 per cent below his average Gallup rating of 70 per cent approval, and last week's poll was completed before he was beginning to win more congressional support.

There are formidable ambushes ahead before the President's main measures are out of danger. His recent triumphs are only half-way points. While they show the Eisenhower program making solid headway, the final votes are going to be harder to get than the votes in the middle stages.

The reassuring 57-to-25 majority authorizing the $3.6 billion mutual security bill by no means guarantees that either the Senate or the House will appropriate $3.6 billion. Numerous senators who voted to authorize that amount as a ceiling served notice that they want to appropriate well under the ceiling.

The highest hurdle for the civil rights legislation was in the House, where its supporters had the greater advantages, but in the Senate where its opponents are in a stronger position.

The unanimous committee approval of the atoms-for-peace treaty almost assures Senate ratification, but no treaty is safe until the necessary two-thirds vote is in.

With all these reservations, the balance of evidence is that the President's political prestige and influence are substantially on the rise.

Government Regards Girard Case Vital

By LYLE C. WILSON

WASHINGTON (UP) — The administration's urgent determination that GI William S. Girard shall be tried by Japanese courts on a charge of manslaughter scarcely can be understood except by persons on the scene here in Washington.

Mr. Wilson

As the matter stands today, Federal Judge Joseph C. McGarraghy's ruling of last Tuesday holds that to turn Girard over to the Japanese would be to deprive him of rights guaranteed to an American citizen by the United States Constitution.

The Justice Department has appealed directly to the Supreme Court, contending that McGarraghy's decision was "clearly wrong" and that it would be in the public interest to obtain speedy disposition of the Girard case.

Agreements Seen Endangered

Administration officials fear disruption throughout the world of the relationship of American troops overseas and the governments of the countries in which they are stationed. One official suggested that, if the Supreme Court forbids a Japanese trial for Girard, the whole structure of agreements under which U.S. troops are based overseas would collapse.

"We well might have to withdraw our soldiers from Japan and perhaps from other countries," this official suggested. He explained that the governments of the countries involved could and perhaps would insist that U.S. soldiers be subject in some degree to local arrest and local law.

Immediate Action Seen

The Justice Department asked the Supreme Court to review the Girard case and is hopeful of immediate action. There is less hope, however, of a decision favorable to the government. On the day before Judge McGarraghy's ruling in the Girard case, the Supreme Court expressed itself emphatically in the field of personal rights. The court's position is wholly in defense of an individual's constitutional rights against encroachments by congressional investigators or federal prosecutors.

This point of view was expressed in extending the protection of the Constitution to several individuals who were Communists or who had had close Communist associations in the past. Having so carefully protected the rights of persons with a record of association with the Communist conspiracy, it generally is assumed here that the Supreme Court would equally defend the constitutional rights of a U.S. soldier.

Behind The News—

Nasser May Lose Last Ally, Syria

By CHARLES M. McCANN

President Gamal Abdel Nasser of Egypt may soon lose his sole remaining ally in the Arab world.

Four of Egypt's eight fellow-members of the Arab League are now openly opposed to his pro-Russian, anti-Western policy and are pretty solidly lined up with the Western Allies.

Mr. McCann

Three others are doing nothing to help Nasser in his steadily developing isolation.

This leaves only Syria in support of Nasser. And diplomatic reports from Middle Eastern capitals say that a political blow-up which would unseat that country's leftist government may come at any time.

A challenge to President Shukri el Kuwatly and Premier Sabri Assali by conservative, pro-Western politicians and business leaders has been increasing in strength for weeks.

Sixty-two opposition members of Parliament have offered their resignations in protest against the government's pro-Nasser policy.

It was the Suez Canal crisis, which seemed to be such a big victory for Nasser, that started him on the way to isolation.

Nasser's victory, it developed, hurt the most important of his fellow-members of the Arab League.

Revenues of oil-producing Saudi Arabia and Iraq fell alarmingly. Lebanon, Jordan and Syria suffered severe economic losses.

This has had a great deal to do with the challenge to the Syrian leftist regime.

As has been said frequently, the visit of King Saud of Saudi Arabia to President Eisenhower last January convinced him that cooperation with the United States was desirable.

Then came the victory of young King Hussein of Jordan over the pro-Nasser enemies who, with Egyptian and Syrian complicity, tried to overthrow him.

In view of the threat to the Syrian leftists, Nasser must feel that he is a lonely man.

At the White House—

Mamie's Check-up

By PATRICIA WIGGINS

WASHINGTON (UP) — Backstairs at the White House:

Mrs. Eisenhower's "top to toe" physical check-up this week, just four months after her last examination, is in keeping with doctor's orders and her own summer plans.

The first lady's personal friends backed up Press Secretary James C. Hagerty in describing her trip to the Army's Walter Reed Hospital Monday as "purely routine." They noted that Mrs. Eisenhower for years has been getting complete physical examinations twice a year, and sometimes more often.

The medical advice from her doctors is that it is the better part of wisdom for women to have such regular check-ups after reaching a "certain age," and, though she doesn't look it, the 60-year-old first lady has reached it.

Also, Mrs. Eisenhower has had a heart murmur since a childhood attack of rheumatic fever. This obliges her to take it somewhat easy and is an added reason for regular medical check-ups.

Mrs. Eisenhower's intimates also report that the timing of her present check-up is tied in with Mrs. Eisenhower's summer plans.

With the official White House social season ended in May, Mrs. Eisenhower is said to be anxious to get up to the Gettysburg farm for her usual extended summer stay. A check-up now would make a return trip to Washington unnecessary later on.

Newsmen questioned Hagerty intensively about the first lady's Walter Reed visit because they recalled that her health became a political issue even before the President's did.

Early in 1955, when she became ill and cancelled all appointments, Democratic National Committee Chairman Paul Butler predicted that her health would keep the President from seeking a second term. Republicans jumped all over Butler in a political donnybrook that was forgotten six months after when the President suffered a heart attack while vacationing in Denver.

The President usually looks cool and collected during his news conferences, but reports are that he didn't relish heading for the old Indian treaty room Wednesday in the current onslaught of record-breaking, hot, humid weather.

The top floor conference room, crowded with sweltering newsmen, screams for air-conditioning even without the addition of the battery of television and camera lights which push the thermometer even higher. By the time the President arrives, the room already resembles a steam bath chamber.

Before the last conference, Hagerty was asked by long suffering newsmen if there was any chance of switching the meeting elsewhere. Hagerty sadly replied: "Nope."

He laughed with the rest when this plaintive question was asked: "Any objection to bathing suits?"

Their double ring vows were exchanged before the Rev. Leonard Sanesi at 9 a.m., Saturday, May 18, before an altar arranged with white carnations and ferns. The aisle used by the bridal party was lined with white crash and satin bows marked the family pews.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a white full length Angelo original gown of Chantilly lace and net styled with a fitted bodice and a full skirt accented with tiers of lace inserts. Her fingertip veil of illusion was held to a tiara of seed pearls and orange blossoms and she carried a white orchid atop a white covered Prayer Book.

Bridal Party

Rosalie Posic was the honor attendant and she chose to wear a full length gown of blue nylon net with a ruffled skirt and matching headpiece. She carried a colonial bouquet of pink carnations.

Serving as bridesmaids were Lorraine Lemley, Sandy Dalola and Sheila Van Fleet, cousin of the bride. They wore gowns of pink styled identically to that worn by the maid of honor. Their bouquets were of blue tinted carnations.

Twin nieces of the bridegroom, Darlene and Dorcen Canestrale were the flower girls. They wore blue nylon net and lace with a scoop ruffled neckline and glittering stardust tiaras. They carried colonial bouquets of pink carnations. Ring bearer Anthony Mazza carried the wedding bands on a white satin pillow accented with lilies of the valley.

Matthew Canestrale, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, was best man and ushers were James Fordanich, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, Jack Skekel and Tom Quintier.

The mother of the bride wore a lavender dress with black accessories and a white orchid corsage. The mother of the bridegroom selected a pink dress with poudre blue accessories and a white orchid corsage.

Hold Reception

A reception was held at the Italian Hall in Smithton. Pink and blue streamers with white wedding bells were used in the decorations and centering the bridal table was a tiered wedding cake. Guests attended from area towns, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Erie and Washington, Pa.

When the couple left for Fort Worth, Texas, for their trip the bride was wearing a brown sheath dress with pastel pink accessories.

The bride was graduated from Rostraver High School in 1956 and the bridegroom was graduated from Vocational High School.

Denny Troychak Trims Down

Dennis Troychak, Monessen's gift to the University of Pennsylvania football team, is home for the summer vacation. He's trimmed off some 20 pounds and now tips the scales at a solid 207. Penn coach Steve Sebo is banking on Denny as a regular tackle. Troychak alternated at that spot last season as a sophomore . . . Another district product at Penn — Bellmar's Glenn Shepler — is expected to see considerable duty at fullback. Glenn was a starting member of the frosh team last year . . . Still another area boy, Joe Daniero, of Redstone, has decided to enroll at Penn after spending a year at Columbian Prep School in Washington, D. C.

Incidentally, district boys are being steered to Penn by Bucky Lutes, the Monessen man who scouts the area in behalf of the Quakers. Lutes reports that Penn is ready to make a serious bid for Ivy League honors this fall, with no less than 20 lettermen returning . . . Chartiers High will have the same coaches in all sports again next season. The School Board took care of all jobs with one blanket motion . . . The 1957 National Baseball Congress state tournament will be held in New Castle beginning July 19. Arthur F. Petrosky, of Midland, is in charge.

Fifth Son for Sherman Brizzi

Sherman Brizzi, the assistant basketball coach at West Newton High, now has a team of his own. The other day, his wife presented him with a fifth son . . . There's no shortage of "kid" baseball in the district this season. Monessen, Belle Vernon, North Belle Vernon, Rostraver Twp. and Washington Twp. all have flourishing baseball programs for the small frey . . . Even though graduation wiped out almost the entire 1956 Monessen High football team, coach Armand Niccolai isn't ready yet to drag out the crying towel as he dreams about the upcoming season. "We'll lack experience, but we should have good spirit," figures Big Nick.

Musial Offers This Batting Tip

Here's a batting tip to the youngsters from the old master himself, Stan Musial: "Of all the suggestions, I'd say the most important for kids is the weight of the bat. I've found they all want to swing heavy bats with the mistaken idea that they'll be able to hit the ball farther. I swing only a 33-ounce bat for the first half of the season. Then when it gets hot I go down to a 31-ouncer." . . . Stan also advises the youngsters to be as relaxed as possible at the plate. "Pick out the ball you want to hit," says Stan. "If you don't have the pitch timed, let it go by and wait for the next one. That is, if there aren't two strikes on you."

Detroit Ready to Make Serious Bid

By OSCAR FRALEY

NEW YORK (UP) — Jack Tighe, the fiery manager of the Detroit Tigers, said today that his team has "nowhere to go but up" and while it may not win the American League pennant "we will decide just who does win it."

Tighe enjoying his first season as a major league manager after 21 years of baseball wandering, picks the New York Yankees as the team to beat.

Whether his club does it depends, he thinks, on whether his batters start to bang the ball consistently.

If they hit like they can, well make a big run at it," he analyzed. "Our attack has been feeble at times and it is fortunate we are as close as we are. Ray Boone and Harvey Kuenn are the keys and if they don't start hitting we'll hover around the .300 spot all year."

Kuenn A Disappointment

Kuenn has been one of Tighe's chief disappointments. Last season he knocked in 88 runs from the cadoff spot. Up to Thursday he had batted in only 14 runs all season, with only three in the past four weeks.

"Jim Bunning has been a big surprise for us," said the 12-year-old Tighe. "He's seven and one with a respectable earned run average of 1.62."

There is a light mood about the Tigers, even though they are not as close to the lead as they had hoped to be. The reason is Tighe, a hard-working manager who watches batting practice, stays on the field to work with his players and sees nothing but that they give 100 per cent effort.

Time In Minors

Tighe, who spent 21 years in the minors, likes the experience. "It was a good life," he said. "I played for Charleston, Wheeling, Paint Creek, Muskegon, Toledo and Buffalo. Now that I finally made it up here, a guy who won't work isn't going to send me back."

But for those who do give out, Tighe is the first man to go to bat.

"I polled every player when Bucky Harris left last year to see who they would like to have as manager," says Van Patrick of Detroit radio station WJR. "To a man they picked Tighe who was a coach on the club for two years. The new owners went with him, instead of bringing in a high-priced 'name' manager—and everybody is glad of the decision right today."

Tighe is, too. And he'd be the happiest fella if his hitters would start banging the ball.

Collegians Rank High in Golf Tourney Field

DALLAS, Tex. (UP) — Walker Cupper Rex Baxter Jr. headed a batch of college youngsters who made up exactly half of the field as the 54th annual Trans-Mississippi golf tournament hit the third round today.

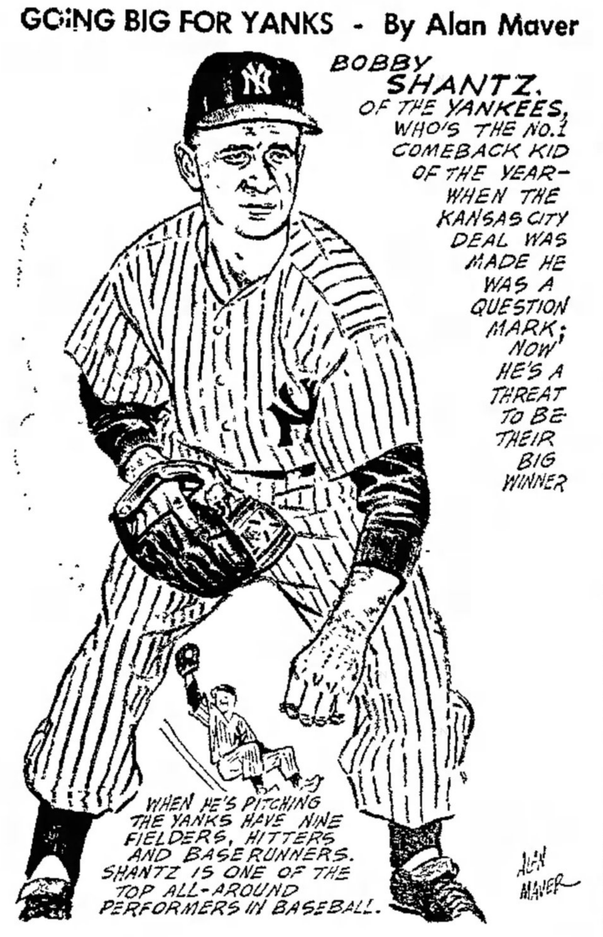
Actually, with Baxter as the bellwether, the University of Houston's NCAA defending championship team seemed to be using this storied tournament as a warm-up for the National Collegiate championship next week at Colorado Springs, Colo.

Four other members of the Houston team were in the field of 16 which set out over the troublesome 6,706 - yard Brook Hollow Golf Club course today in search of quarter-final berths.

In addition to the 21-year-old Baxter, from Amarillo, Tex., the Gulf Coast university also had Jim Hiskey of Pocatello, Idaho, in the top half of the draw and Bob Pratt of Seattle, Wash. Jacky Cupit of Greggton, Tex., and Frank Wharton of Dallas still in contention.

It fell Hiskey's lot to try and cut down defending champion Charlie Coe of Oklahoma City today as the tall, thin Oklahoman continued his search for a fifth Trans-Miss title. Coe has been named non-playing captain of the Walker Cup team which meets the British squad late this summer at Minneapolis.

GOING BIG FOR YANKS - By Alan Maver



Katsuleris Meets Tennis Sensation

Monessen's Mary Katsuleris will try to stop a 12-year old sensation today in the West Penn Junior tennis tournament finals at the Pittsburgh Golf Club courts.

So far, a Charleston, W. Va. girl — Peachie Kellmeyer — has completely dominated the tournament.

Without trouble, Peachie has advanced to the finals in three age divisions — girls under 13, girls under 15 and girls under 18.

Yesterday she polished off top-seeded Elaine Hinkel, 6-1 and 6-0 in the under 18 bracket.

Meanwhile Miss Katsuleris, second seeded in the event, advanced by handling her doubles partner, Karlene Linton 6-3 and 6-2.

Today's schedule has been arranged so that Mary and Peachie will meet in the first match of the day. Later on Miss Kellmeyer will try to earn the other two division crowns.

Doubles Play

In doubles play, Miss Katsuleris and Miss Linton advanced by beating Katie Hammond and Jane Hooton, 6-4 and 6-1.

Today they will meet Elaine Hinkel and Wendy Gilmore for the doubles crown.

Another Monessen tennis product, Jim Baker, got by in his semi-final doubles assignment. He and Len Modzelewski defeated Bill Saint and Jim Knarr, 6-3 and 6-3.

Today they will take on Tom Heatherington and Walt Berberich for the title.

Rosburg Takes Lead in Flint Golf Tourney

FLINT, Mich. (UP) — Pudgy Bob Rosburg has come a long way from the time he had to make the decision whether to turn his talents to baseball or golf. Although he chose golf, he hasn't forgotten his baseball swing.

Rosburg took his unorthodox swing and a hot putter into the second round of the $37,000 Flint Open today. The 31-year-old San Franciscan carded a 6-under-par 33-32—65 Thursday to take a 2-stroke lead in the tourney.

Arnold Palmer, No. 2 money-winner on the circuit, was tied with Johnny Pott and Canadians Al Balding and Stan Leonard for second with 67s.

It was like old home week for Rosburg and Palmer who have marked up some of their greatest successes in Michigan.

Norris In Court Battle

NEW YORK (UP)—Defense attorneys were making a last-ditch fight today to prevent Jim Norris and partner Arthur Wirtz from being forced out of Madison Square Garden.

In the final session of the boxing-monopoly hearing, they were trying to change the mind of Federal Judge Sylvester Ryan, who apparently believes the remedy to the monopoly is to make Norris and Wirtz dispose of their stock in the Garden Corp.

Kenneth C. Royall, former secretary of war and now head of the defense lawyers, claims such a divestiture would be a "cruel, retroactive punishment" for businessmen who thought their conduct of boxing strictly legal until Ryan found them guilty of monopoly in March. The monopoly verdict applied only to their conduct of title fights.

At Friday's session the judge indicated he would force Norris and Wirtz controlling stockholders, to dispose of their Garden holdings "because I personally feel there must be a divorcement of Norris, Wirtz and Madison Square Garden."

Norris is president of the Garden Corp.; Wirtz, a director. The Garden Corp. owns the International Boxing Club of New York. Norris and Wirtz also control the Chicago Stadium and its IBC of Illinois.

Ozarks Appear At New Eagle

Monessen Must win or Drop Another Notch in Standings

Monessen's fading Ozarks will try to get straightened out tonight at New Eagle.

This past week, the Ozarks have slipped from a third place tie to fifth in the Mon Valley League standings. They will drop at least a notch further if they lose this evening.

Manager Pappy Johnson's boys just can't seem to get a winning streak underway. They started the season by winning their first four games. Since then, they've been taking their knocks.

On the other hand, New Eagle is beginning to click after a slow start. In their last outing, Manager Frank Furiga's boys swamped Van Voorhis, 11-0.

Other Games

In other MVL action tonight, Van Voorhis will go to Charleroi, West Newton to Fayette City and Donora to Perryopolis.

Fayette City, atop the league by two and a half games, is a solid choice to whack winless West Newton.

Second place Charleroi may experience some trouble, though, with a disappointing Van Voorhis team which has yet to live up to its full potential.

Valley League standings follow:

West Newton to Play Away Games

All remaining West Newton games in the Mon Valley Baseball League will be played away from home.

West Newton officials requested Commissioner George Kuvinka to reschedule all of their games on the road but the road all teams in the league agreed to the move.

Swedish Student Wins Jr. Tourney

PITTSBURGH (UP)—Jan Sternberg, 18, a Swedish engineering student vacationing here, holed a 45-foot chip shot Thursday to win the Pennsylvania Junior Golf Championship.

The iron gave the bespectacled Swede a 1-up victory over Jack Vernoey, champion schoolboy golfer in Western Pennsylvania, in the final match play.

Sternberg, of Boras, Sweden joined the Schenley Park Golf Club to become eligible for the state championships.

Vernoey, of Montour Heights Golf Course, carded a three-hole edge after the first four holes of play but Sternberg chipped away at the lead and gained the advantage on the 17th hole when he parred at four while Vernoey bogeyed. Both budied the 18th hole with 4's.

DOCTORING YOUR GOLF

By CARY MIDDLECOFF

'Skying' Ball

The pop fly is no better in golf than it is in baseball. And the cause in both instances can be pretty much the same — trying to add extra power that isn't there.

Skying the ball is generally caused by dropping the right shoulder during the downswing Since you lower the plane of your swing, the clubhead contacts the ball too much on the underside.

Dropping the right shoulder is almost invariably caused by a misguided yen to hit the ball too hard. You can remedy this by hitting the ball within your maximum power, depending on how much body twist and hand action you use to produce the needed clubhead speed.

Skying the ball with the driver results from teeing the ball too high. You should tee it just high enough to let the clubface contact all of the ball without touching the ground. Tee it any higher and you're in hot water.

Major Leagues Have Made Money Past Five Years

By NEIL MacNEIL

WASHINGTON (UP) — The 16 major league baseball teams produced $2 867,803 in net profits for their owners in the past five years.

An analysis of the financial statements of the clubs showed today that the American League took the lion's share of the profits—$2,683,192 The eight National League teams showed a profit for the five-year period of only $184,611

Some of the teams, like the Brooklyn Dodgers, the New York Yankees, the Washington Senators and the Chicago White Sox, have turned in profits in every one of the five years from 1952 through 1956.

Others, like the Philadelphia Phillies and the Pittsburgh Pirates, have lost money in every one of the five years.

The financial statements were made public Thursday by a House judiciary subcommittee that has been investigating anti-trust features of organized baseball, football, basketball and hockey.

It was the first time that financial reports of the major league teams have been disclosed.

The figures were given to the subcommittee by Baseball Commissioner Ford Frick.

Fondy's Eye to Be Examined

ST LOUIS (UP) — Dee Fondy, Pittsburgh first baseman and one of the top hitters in the National League, will learn today just how serious an eye injury he received during pre-game practice Wednesday night.

Dr. I. C Middleman, club physician of the St. Louis Cardinals, said the eye specialist he called in, Dr Ben Mulder, would dilate Fondy's left eye for a thorough examination

Fondy suffered a fractured nose and facial bone, as well as the hemorrhage to his eye when he was struck by a ball thrown by teammate Elroy Face.

Middleman said that Fordy probably will be sidelined for "a coup'le of weeks."

Widow of Jake Mintz To Be Fight Manager

By NORM BRAUN

PITTSBURGH (UP) — Mrs. Julia Mintz, whose late husband piloted Ezzard Charles to the heavyweight boxing championship, said today she plans to become Pennsylvania's only lady fight manager.

"I'm definitely going to apply for a license," she said. "My sex will not be a drawback."

Paul G. Sullivan, chairman of the state Athletic Commission, said there was no Pennsylvania law barring women fight managers. He said the commission and its counsel found nothing to prevent Mrs. Mintz from assuming her husband's ring role "provided she qualifies on other counts."

"I've been associated in the boxing game with my husband for 22 years," Mrs Mintz told the United press, "and I think I can handle the job as well as a man. I know the promotional as well as managerial end."

Some Restrictions Seen

Sullivan said there would be some restrictions if she were granted a license.

"Naturally she won't be allowed to work in the corner or anything like that," he said. "The weighins also will pose a problem, but she'll have to work that out for herself."

Mrs. Mintz said the plans to run her husband'ss table of three boxers — middleweight Wilf Greaves, a transplanted Canadian now living at the Mintz home; heavyweight Jack Tonne, of Oakland, Calif., and lightweight Morris Levigee, of San Francisco.

"When my husband died (June 8), the boys came to me and said they would be proud if I took over their contracts," she said. "I began to think seriously about it and asked Mr. Sullivan if I could do so."

Sullivan said Mrs. Mintz's application would be processed "just like any other request for a license."

Court Overrules Denial

He said the state Athletic Commission years ago refused to grant a manager's license to a woman because of her sex "but the Dauphin County Court overruled the decision and she was given a license."

Mrs. Mintz said her brother, Hyman Weisman, would work as a second and would handle the dressing room chores.

"But I'll take care of all the other duties," she declared. "I know all the managers and promoters and if I ask for fights, I'll get them—and at top prices."

Mintz, 57, one of the last of the old-style boxing managers, talked just like this. He probably was best known for his malapropisms. He piloted Charles to the heavyweight crown in 1949 and also stole the show in the title fight by fainting in the middle of the ring before millions of television viewers.

Leader Has Until July 20 to Act on Bills

HARRISBURG (UP) — Gov. George M. Leader has until July 20 to act on all legislation sent to his desk during the last two weeks of the adjournment drive.

Among the bills approved by the 1957 General Assembly late Wednesday were proposals for:

—Prohibiting wiretapping and making persons who invoke the Fifth Amendment ineligible for unemployment compensation benefits.

—Increasing the appropriation to Penn State University by two million dollars to a total of $29,713,400. The appropriation was two million dollars more than the governor requested but still short of the 35 million dollars asked by the university.

—Merging the departments of Public Assistance and Welfare. The merger would create a new "Public Welfare Department" and would perform services now done by the Welfare and Public Assistance departments.

—Requiring most state and local governmental bodies to open their records to inspection. The amended measure would allow accused violators to appeal to court and permit the judge to determine whether the records should be opened or not.

—Creating a "watchdog" legislative committee to oversee details of the state budget. The six-man committee would be known as the Joint Legislative and Budget Finance Committee. Its creation stemmed from differences of opinion between the administration and Republican lawmakers over budget items.

—Regulating the sale and use of brake fluid for motor vehicles and authorizing the Revenue Department to fix minimum standards for such fluid.

Billy Graham Says 'Decisions' More Than Ever

NEW YORK (UP) — Billy Graham said Thursday night that "more than twice as many persons have given their lives to Christ in our New York Crusade than in any other of our American crusades."

The North Carolina evangelist told a Madison Square Garden audience of 16,000 that in the first five weeks of his crusade more than 20,000 persons had made "decisions for Christ." Thursday night's 559 decisions brought the total to 20,611 since the crusade began May 15.

Graham said that "it's a sacred and holy obligation for us not to publish names of those who give their lives to Christ here, but if I were to tell you the names of some of those who have come forward, names known by all of you, it would shake this city."

Vacation Bible School Closes This Evening

The Daily Vacation Bible School at Christ Evangelical Lutheran Church will close with a special program to be held in the parish house this evening at 7:30 p.m.

The school, which has been in operation for the past two weeks, has been conducted each morning from 9 until 11:45 a. m. with the exception of Saturday and Sunday.

Judge Studies Test Motion in Liquor Fight

PITTSBURGH (UP) — Federal Judge John McIlvaine held under advisement today a test motion in the liquor industry's fight against a government tax on bonded whisky before it is sold.

The motion brought government attorneys - seeks dismissal of a $117,559,426 tax-recovery suit filed by Schenley Industries.

Thomas E. Dewey, two-time Republican candidate for president, argued for the liquor firm the tax was unconstitutional. Dewey said the levy was imposed at the rate of $10.50 on every gallon of bonded whiskey as it entered the market or after it had been kept in bond for eight years.

The tax, Dewey maintained, was a direct levy on property or unfinished inventory. Such a tax, he argued, was not constitutional.

The former New York governor said the tax has forced the liquor industry to either dump its wares on the market after eight years or destroy the stored supplies.

Fifty million gallons of bonded whiskey would be destroyed by 1959 if the tax is allowed to stand, Dewey argued.

Federal attorneys, in defense of their dismissal motion contended the government was giving the industry a break by allowing the companies eight years to pay the tax.

Urging Recall of UN

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (UP) —Some Western nations urged today that the General Assembly be recalled to discuss new details of Soviet brutality in Hungary, but a special session appeared unlikely at this time.

Australia is formally on record as favoring immediate Assembly debate on the special committee report on Russian atrocities in the subjugated satellite nation. Britain and several other countries were reported thinking along the same lines.

The United States, however, is said to feel that a special session should be deferred until just before the next regular meeting of the Assembly opens Sept. 17, in order to assure discussion "on the highest level."

The Assembly is nominally in recess at the moment, and the foreign ministers who customarily sit in at the start of a session have scattered. It appeared likely that a special session at this time would be attended mainly by second-stringers.

No decision is expected one way or the other until Wednesday, when representatives of the 21 nations which sponsored the special Hungary committee meet here at the invitation of the United States.

The committee report, published Thursday, cited such acts of Soviet savagery as the wanton shelling of undefended buildings and the barbarous shooting of women and children in breadlines.

CHANGING CANYON

THIS MAY BE the last year to see Hells canyon, a western version of Dante's Inferno, in its primitive glory. Extensive dam-building operations will change the face of the Snake river, wipe out colorful frontier settlements and boost population into the thousands where it is now in the hundreds. The 212-mile stretch of river between Weiser and Lewiston, Id., is known as Hells canyon country. There are several ways to see Hells canyon. One can fly out of Weiser or go down the Snake in a rubber pontoon. Then there are observation points along the way that are reached by car. Inside Hells canyon, it is easy to understand why the French-Canadian trappers called the Snake "The river that has gone mad." Civilization is coming to one of America's most inaccessible spots.

Bakery Union Challenge

WASHINGTON (UP)—Chairman John L. McClellan of the Senate Rackets Committee today challenged the board of the Bakery Workers Union to take a long look at the conduct of Union President James G Cross

"I would recommend that the union's executive board study the proceedings before this committee The burden is now on the union to determine what action, if any, should be taken against Mr. Cross," the Arkansas Democrat said

Cross has been accused in committee testimony of misusing union funds, of resorting to goon squad tactics and of conniving with employers.

But the union's executive board was scheduled to meet today as a special hearing board — not to consider Cross' conduct but to decide what action to take in the case of Cross' chief accuser, Union Secretary - Treasurer Curtis Sims. Sims was suspended earlier after charging Cross with misconduct.

Sims, who was notified of the meeting as McClellan recessed his committee hearings Thursday, told newsmen he would be surprised if the board did not fire him.

McClellan announced, as Thursday's hearings closed, that the committee was through with the Bakers Union "for the present" There remained the possibility that the Sims case might change that decision.

High Court Studies Girard Case Today

WASHINGTON (UP)—Justices of the Supreme Court confer privately today on whether to accept appeals to resolve the legal complexities of the William S. Girard case.

The government Thursday labeled as "clearly wrong" last Tuesday's ruling in the case by Federal District Judge Joseph C. McGarraghy and asked the high court to overturn it as soon as possible.

McGarraghy upset the government's plan to let Japanese courts try Girard, a GI from Ottawa, Ill., on charges of slaying a Japanese woman who was scavenging for scrap metal on a military firing range. McGarraghy ruled that the soldier would have to be tried by an American military court-martial.

Another Appeal Planned

Girard's lawyers planned today to file an appeal of their own with the Supreme Court. They were seeking a writ of habeas corpus to have Girard released from custody. McGarraghy had refused to issue such a writ.

Dayton H. Harrington, Girard's Washington attorney, told a reporter that Girard, now confined to Camp Whittington in Japan, has not been charged with an offense under U.S. law.

"Our position is that he should not be held without being charged," he said.

The court could announce its decision on whether it will review the Girard case any time after today's conference is over. It normally makes these announcements after handing down opinions on Mondays, but has departed from routine in unusual circumstances.

The justices had been expected to finish their work and adjourn for the summer next Monday. But if the Girard case is accepted for argument, it could either extend the current term or provide for a special term as it did in 1953 in accepting the Rosenberg spy case for review.

The government has argued that the whole Girard tangle is a political problem to be handled by the executive branch of the government and not by the courts.

Girard's counsel, on the other hand, argued that the question is one of constitutional law and individual rights.

Two More Protestant Church Groups Plan Formal Merger

By LOUIS CASSELS

WASHINGTON (UP) — Next Tuesday (June 25), in a ceremony at Cleveland, two of America's oldest Protestant denominations will formally merge into one body.

The Congregational Christian churches, descended from the Pilgrims who came to New England aboard the Mayflower, will unite with the Evangelical and Reformed Church, which German and Dutch immigrants established in this country in the early 18th century.

The new body will be called "The United Church of Christ." With 8,200 local churches and more than 2,100,000 members, it will be the seventh largest U. S. Protestant denomination.

Years In Making

Merger negotiations between the two groups have been in progress for years. A previous decision to unite in 1949 was blocked by a law suit brought by an anti-merger faction. A minority group within the Congregational Church still is adamantly opposed to the merger and has threatened to remain independent.

Leaders of the Protestant ecumenical ("drawing together") movement regard the forthcoming merger as one of the most significant that has taken place in the struggle to reunite the long-divided Christian family.

Previous U. S. mergers in recent years have generally been within the bounds of a single historic confession—as when various Methodist bodies joined to form the Methodist Church in 1939, or when two northern branches of the Presbyterian Church united last year.

The Cleveland ceremony will mark the confluence of two entirely distinct streams of Protestantism. The Congregationalists stem from the English reformation, while the E&R churches are spiritual descendants of the continental reformation led by Luther, Zwingli and Calvin.

No Basic Disputes

Despite their diverse ancestries, the two groups found they had no basic disputes over doctrine. The principal differences which had to be ironed out in the protracted unity negotiations were in the realm of policy, or church government.

Congregationalists, faithful to the Puritan tradition, have always accorded local churches the highest degree of autonomy in regulating their own affairs. The Evangelical and Reformed churches, in the Presbyterian tradition, have had a greater degree of central organization and supervision.

The plan of union is designed to provide elements of both systems within the United Church of Christ. In effect, local churches will have a wide latitude to choose for themselves how closely they will be connected with the central organization.

Brief items from the churches:

The National Council of Churches estimates that more than 7,000,000 American children will attend church-sponsored vacation schools and camps this summer.

Religious educators are enthusiastic about the rapid spread of these youth activities. They point out that a child may receive as much religious training in one month at a daily vacation church school as he gets during a full year of the traditional hour-a-week attendance at Sunday School.

The Massachusetts Council of churches in a state-wide crusade against organized gambling. First step in the "educational campaign" was distribution of a state crime commission report asserting that Massachusetts has more bookies than lawyers and dentists. The report added that gambling syndicates are milking the state of more than one billion dollars a year.

Lack of funds has halted major construction on Washington Cathedral for the first time since World War II. The huge Gothic church atop the capital's highest hill was started 50 years ago, and is about three-fifths complete. The Very Rev. Francis B. Sayre, dean, said the cathedral has cost $15,000,000 to date, and about that much more is needed to complete it.

Although the cathedral is a project of the Episcopal Church, it has been supported by Protestants of many denominations.

Budget Bill Is Studied by Gov. Leader

HARRISBURG (UP) — Gov. George M. Leader today studied legislation to require Pittsburgh's governing bodies to publish the budget and present proposed taxes prior to municipal elections.

The House Wednesday unanimously approved Senate amendments to legislation to require the city administration to publish its budget by August 15 and disclose proposed taxes by October 15. Presently Pittsburgh is required to reveal the budget and taxes two weeks prior to the beginning of the new year.

Democrats earlier charged the measure was a political attempt to embarrass their party's city administration. The bill would, in effect, require the tax rates and budget published before the November elections.

Meanwhile, the Senate Republicans killed a House GOP bill to elect Pittsburgh city councilmen by districts and to expand the council membership to 13. The measure was ordered dropped from the calendar after caucus action. The legislation would have replaced the present councilmen-at-large election system.

The case of the Missing Millions

Millions of tax dollars are lost every year through a strange kind of tax favoritism. And you are taxed extra to help balance the loss.

As a customer of an independent electric light and power company, about 23¢ out of every dollar you pay for electricity goes for taxes. But because of present tax laws, people served by federal government power systems escape paying most of the taxes in their electric bills that you pay in yours. They pay taxes of only about 4¢ per dollar on power from the government's TVA, for example. So to make up for the tax revenues which federal power projects don't pay, you have to be taxed more.

Don't you think that every American should carry his fair share of taxes?

Air Conditioners Are Well Camouflaged

CHICAGO (UP)—Air conditioners no longer look like air conditioners. Stoves are hidden in walls and counters. A piece of luggage turns out to be a portable television set.

Manufacturers showed these disguises at the International Home Furnishings Market here, illustrating the trend of variety in new treatment of furniture for the home.

Air conditioners have undergone the most noticeable changes this season.

They are losing that boxy look and manufacturers are trying to make them appear more like a piece of furniture to harmonize with a room's decor.

One company features a model with a removable front panel which can be covered at will with different fabrics or wallpapers to match the color scheme of the home.

Other models are covered in sleek veneers...brightly colored metals which give them the appearance of a chest of drawers.

Still other air conditioning units feature the air vents covered with smart fabrics, much like the speakers on a phonograph.

Television sets also appeared in new dress.

Philco Corp. showed a slim-line portable, less deep than conventional portable with an antenna which folds away into the carrying handle.

The set comes with a variety of coverings—leather, alligator, plastics—and looks at first glance like a piece of expensive luggage.

Ike Lets Cat Out of Bag on Disarmament

LONDON (UP) -- Authoritative sources here said today President Eisenhower let a Western disarmament cat out of the bag in his press conference remarks on the suspension of nuclear weapons tests.

The United States, according to the sources, is prepared to suspend nuclear tests temporarily—but has not yet won complete approval from its allies on the details of the proposition.

Eisenhower, at the news conference Wednesday, indicated the United States is willing to suspend the tests without a prior ban on the production of fissionable materials for nuclear weapons. Such a prohibition had been one of the keystones of Western disarmament policy.

U.S. disarmament delegate Harold E. Stassen referred to the President's press conference when he spoke at the London disarmament conference Thursday. He quoted Eisenhower's statement that the latest Soviet disarmament proposal, which included a call for immediate suspension of nuclear tests, rre a hopeful sign.

Stassen added the United States is now ready to include some controls on nuclear tests in a "first step" disarmament agreement. But he did not indicate whether he had suspension in mind.

Authoritative circles here believed there has been a switch in the basic U.S. policy on suspension of nuclear tests but that Eisenhower had revealed it prematurely. It would be premature because Western consultations on disarmament policy here still had not cleared up their differences.

The conference was adjourned after Thursday's session to permit French delegate Jules Moch to return to Paris on government business.

The talks resume Tuesday and Stassen requested sessions be held daily to permit him to present the new U.S. disarmament plan.

Four Arrested In Demonstration By Young Japs

TOKYO (UP)—Police broke up a student demonstration outside the U.S Embassy today, arresting four of about 200 teenagers who assembled to demand a Japanese trial for Army Specialist 3C William S Girard, of Ottawa, Ill.

The demonstrators also carried placards accusing the United States of trying to "steal Okinawa" and planning to bring nuclear weapons to Japan.

There was some scuffling but no major violence when police dispersed the crowd.

Five demonstrators were admitted to the embassy, where they gave First Secretary Richard L. Sneider a petition demanding that:

—Girard, who killed a Japanese woman on a U.S. Army firing range in January in what he said was an accident, be tried in a native court.

—Nuclear weapons be banned in Japan, Okinawa and Korea.

The demonstration was essentially a protest against the U.S. district court ruling that Girard may not be tried by the Japanese.

Oregon Senator Hits Fast Tax Writeoff as Ruse

WASHINGTON (UP)—Sen. Richard L. Neuberger (D-Ore.) today branded the decision of Idaho Power Co. to give up its fast tax writeoff privileges as a "ruse" to defeat the controversial Hells Canyon bill.

Neuberger and other public power advocates questioned the motives of the company in taking the step at a time when the Senate was nearing a vote on the Democratic - sponsored bill to have the government construct a single, high, power and flood control dam in the canyon.

The Eisenhower administration already has authorized Idaho Power to build three privately-owned low dams in the canyon on a stretch of the Snake River between Idaho and Oregon

To help the company in the project, the administration also granted it the fast tax write-off privilege—a step which immediately created a heated controversy.

The company announced Thursday night that it was giving up the privilege "to eliminate further beclouding of the real issues" involved in the Hells Canyon controversy. It said it was asking defense mobilizer Gordon Gray to cancel the grant.

Assembly Okays Bill to Raise Police Pensions

HARRISBURG (UP) — Gov. George M. Leader today studied a proposal to allow Pittsburgh and Scranton to increase pensions for police and firemen.

The Legislature unanimously adopted legislation to amend existing law regulating Pittsburgh pension and retirement funds and granting an increase in minimum pensions from $110 to $125 monthly. The bill, to become effective immediately upon gubernatorial approval, would apply to persons presently on pension. The $15 raise was termed a "cost of living" increase.

The Scranton bill would authorize the city to increase pensions, allowing the appropriation of additional money into the funds if the present 3 per cent of local revenue were not sufficient to cover a pension hike.

Gunman Holds Up Man with Pay Checks

PITTSBURGH (UP)—A gunman held up a Westinghouse Electric Corp employe in nearby Turtle Creek Thursday and fled with the wages of 45 workers, $3,942 in cash.

Alphonse Lombardi, 51 Pittsburgh, told police he had just cashed the pay checks for his fellow employes, as he had been doing for the 15 years, when a man accosted him, drew a revolver and took the money.

Hospitals Get State Funds

HARRISBURG (UP)—The Legislature today sent Gov. George M. Leader an appropriation bill to give state-aided hospitals 24 million dollars over the next two years.

The House unanimously adopted a conference committee report which also increased allocations to these six community hospitals: Canonsburg General Hospital, $21,600 to $25,600; Children's Hospital, Philadelphia, $176,000 to $186,000; Simon H. Barnes Memorial Hospital, Susquehanna, $12,000 to $14,000; Mercy - Douglas Hospital, Philadelphia, $180,000 to $275,000; North Penn Hospital, Lansdale, $9,000 to $14,000, and St. John's General, Pittsburgh, $45,000 to $50,000.

U. S. Agrees to Some Relaxation Of Trade Bans

WASHINGTON (UP)—The United States has agreed to a cautious relaxation of the trade restrictions between Japan and Red China, informed sources said today.

The trade question was one of the most delicate issues taken up during talks here between Japanese Prime Minister Nobusuke Kishi and top American officials aimed at strengthening U.S. - Japanese postwar ties.

Kishi scheduled a final visit with President Eisenhower this morning to approve a joint communique expected to pledge close cooperation between the two countries in resisting Red expansion in Asia.

The communique also was believed to contain assurances that Japan will be given a greater voice in military and other cooperative arrangements between the two nations.

The White House visit followed a scheduled meeting between the prime minister and Secretary of State John Foster Dulles.

Actress to Sue Show For Fall on Equipment

By WILLIAM EWALD

NEW YORK (UP)—The channel swim:

Actress Kay Francis is suing "Strike It Rich," CBS-TV and the show's sponsor for $150,000. Miss Francis says she hurt herself after tripping on a piece of the how's camera equipment back in 1954.

Frank Sinatra will feature Bob Hope and Dinah Shore on his first ABC-TV show next fall. For later shows, Frank plans to spot Jack Benny, Arthur Rubinstein and at least one of his own kids, Frankie, who is a piano player.

Martha Rountree and Oliver Presbrey, who celebrated their fifth wedding anniversary this week, are mulling over an offer to do a husband-and-wife radio-TV show from Washington. Larry Gelbart, former Sid Caesar gagman, will turn out material for the new ABC-TV Patrice Munsel show.

Welk Going Abroad

Lawrence Welk takes off on a two week talent hunt in Europe starting June 27 — his shows will be on film during his absence. Janette Davis, singer and producer of Arthur Godfrey's "Talent Scouts", is sporting a diamond engagement ring—a gift of Frank Musiello, one of Godfrey's staffers.

Hal March got the emcee job on the new panel show, "What's the Use." The show centers around the identification of crazy inventions and the panel includes Abe Burrows and Nina Foch. The lipstick sponsor of "The $64,000 Question" is trying to land a berth for the show on CBS-TV.

When A. C. Nielsen, the head of the TV survey outfit, guests on Ed Murrow's "Person to Person" July 28, he won't be able to check his own Nielsen rating. The Nielsen survey takes a vacation that week and Mr. Nielsen will have to depend upon Trendex.

"Panic" and "To Tell the Truth," both of which were shaky for a while, got renewals. Lowell Thomas' new one-hour show for CBS-TV will be called "Search for Adventure" — seven episodes are scheduled for next fall.

Kathy Nolan of the upcoming ABC-TV filmed western, "The Real McCoys," is back on the job after suffering a mild concussion—she was conked by a mike boom. ABC-TV is wooing Van Johnson for a new series slated to start in January.

Barbara Hall, the chorine who has won $32,000 on "The $64,000 Question," did an audition this week for the American Shakespeare Festival Theatre at Stratford, Conn. Billy Graham's tenure with ABC-TV was extended for four more weeks to July 20.

William Holden Makes Hobby Of 'Souvenirs'

HOLLYWOOD (UP) — William Holden, movietown's No. 1 tourist, is one actor who's made a second profession of lugging home "souvenirs" — a valuable collection of antique sculpture.

Holden has chalked up seven long trips overseas, and just finished his second trip around the world. From these journeys he's brought back sculpture, pots, masks and other art objects, and now ranks among the top art collectors of Hollywood.

Holden concentrates on ancient sculpture. And while most other collectors buy their art objects at U.S. art galleries, the actor brings his home from his travels, "and that's part of the excitement."

"One has to have some degree of junk man in his blood to be willing to litter up his property," Holden confessed today as he led a tour of his possessions.

"Billy Wilder influenced me to begin my collection. I decided the coming appreciation of art will be in figures, not paintings, because modern homes are good settings for sculpture. You can't hang paintings on glass."

Holden's collection fills both his home and his dressing room-office at Paramount Studio. In his home is a 2,500-year-old Egyptian head, a Buddha head from Siam and pottery from ancient Greece. At first, he says, his children groaned at his purchases "but now they are starting to collect, too."

Sweden and New Zealand have the lowest mortality rate of all countries.

Cases of Cross-eyes Are Usually Curable

By H. N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

Like many diseases, a case of crossed-eyes frequently is inherited.

While you yourself may not be cross-eyed, you can still pass it on to your child from your parents or some other relation. Perhaps it can be traced to an aunt or an uncle, or even a first cousin. But generally you can trace it to some member of the family.

Naturally, there are several other causes of crossed-eye. Some occur during delivery of the infant.

Compression of the baby's head in the birth canal can cause tiny hemorrhages in the brain. While such hemorrhages generally are absorbed and are not harmful, they sometimes hamper control of the baby's eye muscles by damaggng the brain centers. This can result in a cross-eyed child.

Forceps delivery also can, on occasion, result in crossed-eye. When pressure is applied to the baby's face and head by the instruments, there is a possibility that the eye muscles might be damaged.

The only cure for such cases of crossed-eye is an operation. Cases brought on by other causes respond favorably to orthoptic training.

Nervousness sometimes brings about crossed-eye. When a youngster is tired, overstimulation of the brain's nerve center which controls eye convergence might cross his eyes. When he is relaxed, his eyes are perfectly all right.

It is quite possible, you know, to overtire your eyes. If a child is weak because of an illness or a poor diet, too much reading may be enough to cross his eyes.

Poor vision in one eye, if not corrected by glasses, may result in crossed-eye. Diphtheria and certain other diseases can weaken eye muscles or brain controls which affect the eye movements.

But no matter what the cause, there is one important thing to remember. By surgery, glasses or eye exercises, the vast majority of cross-eyed cases can be corrected.

Quetion and Answer

L. M.: My daughter has plantar warts. What would you advise?

Answer: Plantar warts are best treated by means of X-ray. Usually, one or two X-ray treatments will cure them.

Pioneer UP Employe Announces Retirement After 50 Years Service

By STEVE HOWICK

CLEVELAND, Ohio (UP)—Ed Mullen, telegrapher for the United Press from the day of its inception, today announced his retirement.

The genial Irishman's decision, long forming, was announced on the 50th anniversary of the services' birth date.

Edward Joseph Mullen 73, chief operator in UP's Washington bureau during World War I, decided reluctantly to stand aside from the flow of day - to - day history which for more than 52 years his quick hands have transmitted by Morse key and modern teletype.

"Sure I'll miss all this," said Mullen, indicating the Cleveland bureau where he has worked since 1920 "But my wife and I decided I should have some time of my own"

Self-Taught Telegrapher

"All this" has filled Ed Mullen's life since he went to work as a self-taught telegrapher at the age of 15. After some commercial and newspaper work, Mullen was appointed operator for Publishers Press in Springfield, Ohio One year later he was appointed operator for Scripps-McRae at the Cincinnati Post.

These two agencies merged in 1907 into United Press, with Mullen making the change also. After a tour in the Cleveland bureau, Mullen was called to Washington as chief operator in the months preceding World War I.

There, the flashing fingers of a jaunty, clothes-horse type pounded out in Phillips code the text of the declaration of war against Germany There for three solid days Mullen transmitted the numbers of selectees who were to make up the American Expeditionary Force.

Mullen returned to Cleveland in 1920 and remained in this bureau until today.

Now he will "buy two fishing poles and just laze around."

In retirement, Mullen might relax, but in harness he could not.

Ed Mullen, last to retire of three surviving telegraphers who helped give birth to the United Press, at one time sat only to eat His telegraph instrument and typewriter stood on a chest-high shelf Mullen stood or paced the floor, but never missed a word of the dot-dash chatter which once carried the world's news.

From that instrument, later from the keyboards of modern teletype printers, the nimble fingers of Ed Mullen have ticked off some of the high marks in a half century's history.

"I worked the Iroquois Theater fire, the first war beginning to end the sinking of the Titanic, the burning of the Morro Castle, the Russo - Japanese War, the Scopes trial — many, many more just as important," he said

Others have lived through the era, but few have been closer to the daily history of the world than Ed Mullen, dean of United Press telegraphers, leader of what UP Board Chairman Hugh Baillie called a "noble breed the corps d'elite of the industry."

State Revision Of Constitution

HARRISBURG (UP)—The General Assembly today approved bipartisan legislation to set up a temporary state commission to study Pennsylvania's 83-year-old Constitution for possible revision or overhaul

The House concurred unanimously in a Senate amendment doubling the appropriation to finance the study to $50 000, and sent it to Gov George M Leader

The bill would create a 15-member commission of citizens under a directive to report its findings to the 1959 Legislature The governor and the leaders of the two chambers would each appoint five members

Leaders of The World Praise UP

By UNITED PRESS

World leaders sent the United Press their congratulations today on the 50th anniversary of its founding and expressed their appreciation of the role it has played in the accurate and impartial coverage of news around the globe. The United Press was incorporated June 21, 1907

These are some of the messages received:

President Eisenhower: "Our free press is — and always has been — one of the strongest assets of our way of life One reason the United States has become a great nation is that the American people have been well and truthfully informed of the tremendous news developments of our times by our newspapers and broadcasters. Thus, our people have been able to make intelligent decisions on the basis of facts

A press association, such as the United Press, has an even larger role By serving and receiving a steady stream of factual news from around the world it performs the valuable service of participating in the general world knowledge of the truth and by so doing strengthens the free world and its peoples

"My sincere congratulations to the United Press as it celebrates its fiftieth anniversary."

Premier Nobusuke Kishi of Japan: "The United Press is to be congratulated on its history of half a century of service to the principles that all peoples have the right of free access to information The peoples of the world have benefitted by the dedicated efforts of your news agency to this ideal"

Chancellor Konrad Adenauer of West Germany: ". . Extend my heartiest best wishes to the United Press on its 50th anniversary As one of the great news agencies in the world, the United Press has served the goal of accurate news reporting. Fifty years is only a beginning May the next fifty be just as successful"

Pope Pius XII, through the Vatican secretariat of state: "On the occasion of the golden jubilee of the United Press, the Holy Father extends his felicitations to you, to the directors, staff and collaborators of the organization"

United Press 50 Years Old Today; Receives Tribute from President

By JACK V. FOX

NEW YORK (UP)—The United Press marked its 50th anniversary today with a tribute from President Eisenhower on the part it has played in strengthening the free world by straight reporting of the news

On its birthday today, the 10,000 men and women who make up this unique newsgathering organization were, as every weekday, sending almost 4 million words of news literally around the world

Their stories and pictures went to 1 560 newspapers in this country, were translated into 45 languages for clients in 71 foreign nations They were heard on radio, seen on television, beamed to ships at sea

United Press today looks back on covering a turbulent half century that started with the cry, "get a horse," and looks forward to a tomorrow where the world seeks in London an answer to chasing the hydrogen bomb.

Complex News Coverage

The world has become so much smaller in those 50 years And the United Press and its fellow news organizations have played a part in shrinking it. At the same time, it has grown immeasurably complex and demanding of those who cover its news

President Eisenhower remarked those facts in his message of congratulations to United Press on its anniversary He hailed a free press as one of the strongest assets of our way of life and said:

"By sending and receiving a steady stream of factual news from around the world, it performs the valuable service of participating in the general world knowledge of the truth and by so doing strengthens the free world and its peoples"

Such recognition is a cause for pride among Unipressers They work in a vast cloud of anonymity for the most part and one of the crosses they must bear is the layman's too frequent question, "Yes, but what newspaper do you work for?"

Most Hotly Competitive

The fact is that no newspaper can gather all the world's news That can be approached only through the intricate web of newsmen the press association spins, the network of communications—400,000 miles of U.P. leased lines in this country alone.

United Press over the years has come to be known as the most personalized of the news agencies and usually the most hotly competitive The nervous systems of 4,000 staffers are so enmeshed that a bulletin from Hong Kong makes men jump from Miami to Seattle

The spirit is unique It is fascinating to watch a former UP man join a gab session with Unipressers Within minutes you will find him using the pronoun "we" as if he had never left—and, in a way, he never does.

On its anniversary, United Press received congratulations and greetings from around the globe Pope Pius XII sent his felicitations as did leaders of nations of Europe and Asia

A Stiff Race

The magazine Newsweek had this to say.

"This week, as UP celebrates its 50th anniversary, the second service (Hearst's featurish International News Service is two years younger) was still running hard to become the first Many newsmen thought it was giving the Associated Press a stiffer race than its 109-year-old rival had ever experienced"

Said Time.

"The first major US news service to prosper as a commercial undertaking, the UP. today is the world's most enterprising wire-news merchant."

The UP. went into its second 50 years with clients, revenue, personnel and rate of growth all at an all-time high

President of United Press today is Frank H Bartholomew. Like all UP. chief executives, he is basically a newsman with experience ranging from the great California earthquake of 1925 to World War II correspondent in the Pacific and reporter at the A-bomb drop at Bikini.

Main Function Unchanged

Bartholomew, in an anniversary statement, pledged the UP to experiment with new mechanical and electronic systems and approaches which will help solve the increasing problems and complexities of newspaper publishing

"But the principal function is unchanged—to provide the people with the best possible coverage of the world in which we live," he said. "The news will have to be gathered and put in shape by trained men and women who comprise our 'staff'"

The magazine Editor & Publisher, trade journal of the industry, in a review of the U.P.'s first half-century, noted this week the many "firsts"—among them using bylines on stories, transmitting features on the leased wire, creation of a fast mail service for background dispatches.

Kent Cooper, Indianapolis bureau manager of U.P., later to be general manager, now executive editor of Associated Press, introduced the "pony" service—reading news by telephone to several newspapers simultaneously over a joint circuit.

Bartholomew is the eighth U.P. president. His predecessors included Hugh Baillie (whose tenure was longest — 1935-55), Karl A. Bickel, W. W. Hawkins and Roy W. Howard.
